

ABSTRACT

A system and method protect an electronic network. One or more agents are installed within the electronic network and perform an initial assessment of the electronic network to determine normal activity. The electronic network is then monitored for abnormal activity using the agents, and protected by blocking the abnormal activity using the agents.